

Honors Faculty Workshops Spring 2008

Who are our students and how do they learn?

Beginning in Honors

Friday, February 8th Noon – 1:30
317 Moulton Hall

If you are relatively new to teaching Honors students (teaching an Honors course for less than two years or planning to teach in the next year) join colleagues as we discuss strategies for working with some of the university's most academically talented undergraduates. What special challenges do these students bring to the classroom? What are some of the ways you can use the Honors classroom as a laboratory for innovative pedagogy? Box lunches will be provided.

Excellence in Honors

Wednesday, March 5th Noon – 2:30
Moulton Hall Ballroom

This session is for any faculty member interested in teaching in Honors – those with experience and those simply curious. Learn how colleagues propose and plan a successful Honors colloquium, make an Honors LER innovative and unique, include service-learning in an Honors class, teach a mixed Honors/non-Honors section, and direct Honors theses. If you already teach Honors classes come to connect with other Honors faculty members. If you have never taught in Honors, this session will introduce you to some of the ways you might consider doing so. Lunch will be provided.

Honors and Undergraduate Research

Friday, April 18th
University of Akron's Honors Center
KSU and UA Joint Faculty Workshop

The second annual joint Honors Faculty Workshop will be hosted by the University of Akron this year. Again this year, the workshop will be followed by a reception. Watch for more details about this session later in the semester.

Please RSVP to the faculty professional development center
Call 2-2992 or register on-line at <http://fpdc.kent.edu>

