

Writing Well Teaching Well

Learning through the process of writing

In January, 2008, the University Teaching Council with the assistance of Jeanne Smith presented a workshop for WIC faculty focusing on guided revision. The UTC is pleased to re-visit this topic and continue the discussion.

In response to the increasing number of faculty members teaching Writing Intensive Courses, the interest in engaging with other faculty in developing curriculum, and the growing awareness of the importance of the writing process to learning, the University Teaching Council is presenting an afternoon with Brian Huot, writing program coordinator for the KSU Writing Center. With his expertise in writing and teaching, and continuous involvement with faculty and students, Brian brings a fresh perspective to the writing process .

This workshop promises to be of value to ALL faculty. Even if you attended the January session we encourage you to join us again and to bring along your colleagues.

This event is an opportunity for us to take a brief time to reflect together as well as to share ideas and inspirations for learning through writing. As a valuable tool in the process we ask that you bring your syllabus or examples of assignments to share with others.

During the session we will also share teaching ideas and resources to use for guided revision.

Moulton Hall Ballroom

Thursday, April 10, 2008, 1:00-3:00p.m.

Refreshments will be provided.

Please r.s.v.p. to Cheril Walker, UTC learning program coordinator, by Monday, April 7, 2008.

clwalke1@kent.edu

co-sponsored by the fpdc

